Well, good day, everybody. It's a Thursday, the 22nd of February, 2024. Johnny Lada. Great to have you back on, mate. Thanks, Woody. Great to be back here with everyone. And really good to have our own mate, Dr. Philip Altman on. Thank you for joining us again, Philip. Hi, Graham. Hi, Johnny. It's been a while since we've had you on and there's been a lot going on, but, um, we'll cover off on a couple of things that have been happening today, which are quite newsworthy.

Uh, for example, the Courier Mail have, uh, On page 18 in a small article brought to the attention of their readership that, uh, that neurological and heart disorders, uh, may be attributed in small part to the vaccine. Um, so, uh, to both of you, we, we, uh, we often get, uh, get people telling us, you know, what are you still waxing on about this stuff for?

I mean, it's over, isn't it? But we are clearly seeing. Um, that there is, there's, there's a fair amount of pressure being put on the people who made the decisions that got us into this mess and they just can't keep denying the truth and that truth is, is coming out in dribs and drabs and we must keep the pressure on, we must remain focused, we must remain diligent to the fight that we came in on and that was ending mandates, making sure these things never happen again and we want investigations, the whole thing.

It's not over just because things have slackened off. Because we don't know what's coming. We've got a, we've got a fair idea of what's coming. But, um, we've got to stay diligent to this task. So that's what we're going to do. The poster behind me, uh, uh, for the, the movie Trustful Julian Assange. Uh, for those of you who haven't seen that, you need to see that.

You can book online to, to, uh, sorry, you can book it at theatres. It looks like it's coming to all the major event cinemas in Australia. But the whole idea of, uh, Julian Assange, the Julian Assange situation is that he If he was not now in jail and if he hadn't been censored, a whole bunch of this stuff would be revealed now.

So, um, interesting stuff coming on. Uh, so Phil, you'd have to agree. We've got to keep the pressure on. Yeah. This censorship is at the center of the issue. If, if, uh, our media, uh, our mainstream news media wasn't censoring all this, this whole battle would be over within days. Yeah. Everyone would know the truth.

But, uh, I, I place the blame at the feet of the mainstream news media, and thankfully There's guys like you two who were, who were getting the message out to some people, but, but of course, um, not enough people yet. Well, we're very encouraged by, um, by a lot of the participation in our program from notable people who are starting to rise to the surface.

Um, we have heard from Tony Abbott that he'll be coming onto the program early in March. Uh, John, he's had to go away again. We understand. Um, and I'm also happy to announce that, uh, A Walkley journalist of, um, I think six or seven awards won Gold Walkley, and that is Ross Coulthard, has agreed to come onto the program and talk about the declining standards in journalism.

And that's what we're facing. That's the big issue at the moment, Johnny Larder, is, uh, the declining standard in journalism. And we see, um, doctors like Nick Coatsworth, who are dabbling in medicine and journalism at the same time. Uh, Alan Swan seems to have disappeared. Norman Swan seems to have disappeared, uh, into the ether.

But, um, Nick, Nick Coatsworth, Johnny is, is slowly dipping his toe into the water. What can you tell us there? Well, he was on 2GB with Ben Fordham this morning discussing this report that's been released with the 99 million participants or study, which reveals that there is definitely a link to injury from the vaccines, which, which he says isn't alarming, but I don't know how you say it's not alarming if you're being injured from the things that I mean, how many experts have we spoken to, including Uh, Philip, uh, that, that, uh, experts in their field across the entire health sector and in the world, world renowned people, um, Angus Dalgleish, professor of oncology.

He says that these mRNA vaccines must stop now. Uh, that, you know, we haven't seen the worst of it. So if these red flags are here now, uh, the thing that Coatesworth did agree to, uh, with Fordham, which I, I thought was interesting was that, uh, he, he agrees that there is an underreporting, uh, of injuries to the TGA and probably across the world, I suppose.

And in our sector, I think Cody, that's, that's due in part to the. The, uh, the authority opera, uh, which has essentially, uh, been hitting physicians with a stick. Uh, if, if they speak up and I imagine that people are hesitant to report these injuries as well. This is why we're seeing all this long COVID nonsense, but I'm really wondering what's going on with opera because I mean, I'm still registered.

As a paramedic, if you go onto the APRA website, you'll see that I'm still registered. Why are they not pursuing me now? I mean, I've been more vocal in the last 12 months than at the point where they said, Oh no, you're a risk to the public. I mean, here I am telling people that they're killing you. These vaccines, they're killing you.

Yeah. Uh, I don't know what more you can say. And APRA doesn't seem to want to do anything about me now. Why, why aren't they coming after us now? Now I'm saying these things. So, Apra, what are you doing? I mean, you either, uh, have to take back all this BS that you've been going on with and apologize and say you got it wrong, which we know you have, or come after me again.

Bring it on, says John. Bring it on. Look, at the end of the day, if you steal a car, uh, you know, it's not any different the second time around, is it? For Nick Coatsworth to finally admit that there's been underreporting of adverse drug reactions, serious adverse drug reactions. He is seriously, seriously late to the party.

Everyone in the pharmaceutical industry knows and accepts There is Underreporting. The TGA itself has gone into print. I can give you a reference that says the underreporting is at least 10 times. See getting one 10th of the reports that are real. At least now that that is a minimum. Most people would say the underreporting is by a factor of somewhere between 30 and 40 to a hundred times.

Especially given the, uh, APRA, uh, aggressive behavior that, uh, Johnny has just mentioned. Yeah. Uh, there are many, many doctors out there who don't even know how to report an adverse drug reaction to the TGA. They don't even know there is a system. And if they know a system, they're not prepared to spend 30 or 45 minutes.

online, trying to lodge the details of a case. They want to get on and see the next patient. So an underreporting factor of 100 is, is probably very realistic. So if the TGA say that there have been 14 deaths, There's probably been 1400, right? At a minimum, minimum. Now, this is acknowledged throughout the world.

Another 32 year old athlete dropped dead in the last 24 hours, we're told. Yeah, yeah. Now, the other thing that I'd like to say is that, you know, those comments from Coatsworth. About, oh, there, there could be a link to, to the vaccines. Well, if you've been in the industry for a long time, and I'm sure Nick Coatsworth knows about this.

There are established guidelines in order to evaluate. Whether or not an observation is caused by a drug. It's, it's, it happens all the time, right? So there has to be a framework to evaluate it. And it's called the Bradford Hill Criteria. And if you look at the 10 components of the Bradford Hill Criteria, the link between the COVID 19 vaccines and sudden death or cardiovascular death, Neurological disease, um, and so forth satisfy all the criteria in most cases.

You know, there is a theory about how this is occurring. There's a temporal relationship that is a time course relationship. Um, there is, there are healthy people who received an injection, who walked in, perfectly healthy young people, walked in, got an injection, and the next day, they're in hospital. Or dead.

Or dead. Now, you know, if you don't acknowledge this. Um, it, it really is serious. It's willful blindness in my opinion. Well Nick Coatsworth has come out publicly and condemned the government and the health bureaucracy and the AMA in particular around bulk billing and he's criticized the AMA about their, uh, their push to have mask mandates restored in Queensland, saying that all they're going to do is add to the landfill because that's the only good masks are for.

You know, he, he's been out there and, and I see him as a, he's a fairly credible individual. Now, he came out fairly hard and said, everybody's got to do this. He was the poster boy, and now he's starting to have second thoughts. You can see it in him. And so we say to you, Nick Coatsworth, um, if you think That there's some kind of a chance that the vaccines are causing a problem.

You don't, you need to be more firm than that. You need to come out and say, look, we, we may have made an error here and we need to stop and investigate. We need to turn all of our investigative resources into working out what's gone on. You can't just say, Oh, maybe possibly, uh, it's likely, uh, only slight.

Because don't forget, all the other trials that happened and all the other problems we've had with other medications in history, one or two people dropped dead and the whole thing's shelved. Now, why aren't you doing that now, Nick? You really got to, um, I strongly urge you to sit down at home and have a really good think about this.

We would love to have you on the program. We really, really would. And we'd love to talk to you privately as well, to let you know what we're saying, because I had a message again last night from a woman whose 42 year old son dropped dead two days after the booster, a fit, healthy young man with a father of seven in a blended family dropped dead.

And, uh, when the mother was talking to the doctors about it, uh, I'm certain it's a vaccine injury. Uh, I believe one doctor just walked out on her and told her to go away. And another doctor later on said, yeah, I'm certain it's a vaccine injury. So you've got all this rubbish going on. There's too much to ignore.

It's time to speak up. And that's why we've got to keep pushing this stuff, Johnny. Well, the catchphrase now is it's very rare. Uh, you know, 18 months ago, there was no chance you could, you could get a side effect according to these people, but now it's very rare. I mean, you know, in, in a month's time, it'll be mild, mild risk.

It'll just keep escalating. Uh, you can't keep ignoring this stuff. I mean, there is red flags everywhere. It doesn't matter whether it's mortality rates. You know, we've got the, the, uh, the, the death rates in motor vehicles going up. Why is that? Is it because people are having events at the wheel? I mean, these are things that they just need to explore.

Are they single vehicle accidents? You know, they're not revealing any of the data. Uh, and all these things need to be looked at in context. Um, they're not, you know, any one of them, I suppose, is not, is not, uh, reason to say, well, yes, conclusively that's going on. But I think it's very naive of these people not to at least look.

at the evidence that's before them and there's a lot of red flags and that's what I hear all these experts say. There's lots of red flags, there's things that we've never seen in our careers in 40 or 50 years and why, why we're not taking notice of these people now is just criminal. A young mother of seven year old twins was at the wheel of a car between Kalgoorlie and Perth yesterday or the day before.

And, uh, the car swerved dramatically to the right, from the right side of the road, from the correct side of the road, and went straight into a tree. Dramatic. I mean, it wasn't like, I'm gonna run this car into a tree because I don't live anymore and I want to kill my daughters as well. So you aim directly at the tree.

This car was driving along and the photos of the skid marks on the road show a dramatic 90 degree turn straight into a tree. Both seven year old girls were killed and the mother's in hospital. Now we saw the photo of the road and Michelle's first response was I bet she's had a medical incident at the wheel.

You know, these things are going on now. We can't say, Oh, maybe possibly we've got to get down and get this investigated. If we're wrong, great, but prove to us that we're wrong. Investigate this properly and prove to us that we're wrong because, um, this has gone on long enough and we're not going to give up until you come to the party now.

And this is never going to be resolved unless they start doing autopsies. Okay. Yeah, they've been resistant to doing autopsies. The word is out. They do. The coroners did not want to allow the autopsies. Because if you do an autopsy, you determine the cause of death, then there's no doubt. Well, that's the last thing that a lot of these people that are pushing these vaccines want is autopsies.

There's been limited studies done overseas, mainly in Germany. But also there was a terrific series done by McCullough and Co. Just, just recently, about 300 published reports. Of autopsies were, were reviewed and I tell you what, the results aren't good. Now, I think the government and governments know this and they're trying to suppress the information.

I can, I can add to that, Philip, because I can tell you now that New South Wales Ambulance has changed its verification of death protocol. Interestingly, it now says reporting a death to the coroner is no longer required if the deceased person had not seen a medical practitioner within the six months prior to the death.

Why? Well, are there too many to handle? Are they trying to reduce the caseload? There it is in black and white in New South Wales Ambulance's protocol, verification of death. I mean, it clearly it clearly is, uh, this, this is monstrous. What's going on. Look, there's a whole bunch of stuff happening that really requires a deep dig.

Uh, I was in Lismore yesterday. And we wandered around town and I spoke to a few people who recognized me, it was great to talk to them. And I spoke to a gentleman who's owned a business in Lismore for decades. And he went through the floods, he's been flooded out a few times. He's, uh, very active in his community, he's born and bred in Lismore.

And I said to him, how was it during the floods? That was two years ago. John, you remember, we were in Korokai two years ago. How was it during the floods? He said it was horrendous. Never seen anything like it. I said, how many died? Ha, he said, officially four, officially four. But he said, we know for a fact there were 18 people in a motel who drowned in one motel in the city centre.

There was a guy with a big ocean going boat who brought his boat on a trailer to the, uh, to the road that led into the floodwater. He was asked by a friend who lived in Lismore to bring his boat and come and help him. The S. E. S. tried to stop him and he said you, you've got two choices, you either get out of the way or I run over the top of you but I'm putting this boat in the water and I'm going to do some work.

The S. E. S. were desperate to stop people in private boats from going onto the water. This man who owned the boat was driving the boat slowly past homes. that were up beyond the guttering in water, old homes with corrugated iron roofs. And he said, you could hear people screaming in the roof cavities everywhere.

So in other words, the water rose up, they went up through the manhole, they went into the roof cavity, and he said an hour later when he came back, nobody had been there, but the voices had stopped and the roofs went under. Two young fishermen told me that they put a tinny in the water and during the time they were there, they retrieved 11 bodies.

So, why? Now, the gentleman concerned saw his local member in his store and said, what's the verdict on the death toll? And the local member said the official death toll is four, but he said, Oh, there's been a lot more than that. People have gone missing. Some people have not been seen since he looked a man straight in the eye.

And he said, the official death toll is four. Why, why would you, why would you want to cover that up? I mean, this, look, this is why we get robbed. This is why we look, we are three ordinary citizens. We love our country. We love the works that we, the works that we performed in our careers. We loved our careers.

We're sensible human beings who are good at risk benefit analysis. And now we're seen as redneck conspiracy theorists, radical right wingers, because we want to know the truth. And we'll say it again till the cows come home. Conspiracy theories thrive when governments bullshit the people. That's it. And you have been bullshitting the people for decades.

And we've had enough. We've had enough. It's time to get the truth out there. For goodness sake, we're big people now. We're grown up. What have you got to hide? Why are you the ones hiding? Why are you the ones censoring the media? Why are you the ones paying media off to censor everybody? Mainstream media is dead in the water.

You better start looking at working in other areas because the mainstream media has lost complete credibility. Nobody trusts it anymore. It's a laughing stock. Because of things like this. Because people like Nick Coatsworth might be contracted to Channel 9 and he can't really say what he wants to.

Who's running the country? Rupert Murdoch, come on. We want the truth and you don't have to pass legislation then to cover up misinformation. Or you might pass a legislation and allow that legislation to be applied to the mainstream media and the government as well. And then we'll see who's really spreading the bullshit.

Philip Altman, um, your substacks have been very well researched. You've got some information there from Embalmers that Dr. John Campbell has shared. Um, tell us what you know, and please feel free to share screen. Right. Well, uh, John Campbell has done all the running on this, uh, in conjunction with a few brave embalmers.

Who have stood up to report what they've been seeing. Uh, not all bodies are embalmed. Of course, uh, I've been hearing, uh, through these, these embalmers that only about a quarter of bodies are embalmed, but of those that have been embalmed after the vaccines, the COVID 19 vaccines have been rolled out, they're seeing some very strange things.

In the blood vessels, and I'll show you a photograph that was taken from one of the John Campbell interviews. Can you see that? I'm sure there it is. It's coming up there. Oh, man. Okay. So what you're looking at there is a branch. It looks like a bit of rubber. It's a bit of rubber. It's not really a clot. If you look to the right, you can see clots are sometimes pulled out of veins, um, uh, during the process of, of embalming, and they would look like that, that, uh, dark red jelly like, uh, vessel on the far right hand side.

But that one right in the middle of this branch, the white one that that's been looked at by pathologists, and as best they can determine most of that substance. Is protein is an amyloid protein amyloid protein is basically misfolded protein that is non functional, right? And that was pulled out of someone.

Now, there have been a number of interviews, uh, with these, these embalmers and they're reporting about 25 percent of the people that they embalm are showing these white spots. amyloid, uh, structures. Some of them are 30 centimeters long. Now the question is, did they occur after death or before death? Now that's still being investigated and some of the embalmers are, are saying that they've never seen this before in their entire life.

And there are doctors who are reporting trying to remove blood clots or clots in vessels from people. On the operating table, and some of these clots look like these amyloid clots, so we know that at least in a proportion of cases, they're occurring in live people. If you had a clot like this, this one looks like, I think, from memory, it was probably from the carotid, which would have meant no one, no one can survive that.

If that clot even blocked, uh, uh, 50%. Or so of the, of the, uh, carotid, you, you, you, you'd probably die. So, this is being reported, not by one, one embalmer, but by many. They're talking amongst themselves. And, uh, this alone, this, this observation alone, even in a half dozen people, would normally, before COVID, prompt A massive FDA TGA investigation.

It would be headline news in mainstream news media everywhere. And yet, there's silence. So, you know, this is, this is really disturbing. Back to your point about vaccines, you know, and what will it take to withdraw these vaccines? Well, history tells us. that there have been vaccines that have been withdrawn with as few as 10 reported deaths.

We're not looking at 10 reported deaths. We're looking at hundreds of thousands, if not millions of deaths. And yet, you know, if, if people can't realize that this is the most serious thing that's ever happened, I think in the history of Australia, there's something wrong. We're not talking about, about conspiracies with people.

Being corrupted and approving a D. A. here or there or stealing some money or something. This is hundreds of thousands of people dying. The excess deaths alone in Australia, if you look at them, the non COVID excess deaths since the vaccine rollouts would probably be in excess, depending on how you calculate it, in excess of 50,000, maybe 60,000.

And those are just the deaths. That's not serious injury. That's not people carrying serious heart conditions or neurological conditions. And most of those are healthy young people. Exactly. Who would not have had more than a cold if they'd contracted COVID. Yeah, well, now, now we know that that really, it wasn't really a pandemic as most people are saying now that know about the epidemiology.

It was at, at worst equivalent to a, a serious flu. We, we were fooled. We were lied to.

Yeah. What can you say? I mean, we, we've been lied to from the very beginning. The, the virus came from a lab. Almost everyone would agree with that. Now, but yet, there's no investigation. The virus doesn't prevent transmission of infection or Or getting the infection. It doesn't stay in the arm as we were told.

The lockdowns were deleterious. You just, you just look at Sweden. Sweden didn't have lockdowns or mass mandates or vaccine mandates. They did much better than Australia did. And yet, we have people who advise the government And led the policy implementation, which was disastrous for this country. And they've been given orders of Australia and they haven't apologized for the damage that's been done.

They should be giving their marching orders of Australia, Johnny Lada. Well, uh, look, it, it incenses me when you say the Brett Suttons of the world, the Kerry Chance, uh, electing these awards, it's, it's, it's. It's beyond belief. Uh, I still can't understand how criminal proceedings haven't been commenced, uh, in regard to these, uh, matters.

I mean, it's, uh, it's murder on a scale. It's comparable to what happened in Nazi Germany. I don't care what anyone says. It's worse in my view. Yeah, they, we, we were told, um, that these vaccines Were, quote, safe, unquote. We were told they were safe. Actually, the TGA and every drug regulatory agency in the world knows that you cannot say a drug is safe.

No drug is safe. That's understood by everyone. In fact, it's enshrined in Australia in the TGA advertising code. You cannot say a drug is safe. So how did they say it was safe? They passed a special provision in the advertising code to allow people to say COVID 19 vaccines were safe. And they did that in June of 2021, when there was very little information next to no information on the safety of these things.

How did they know it was safe?

And when you look at it on the scale of things, uh, the worst of the, the, so-called pandemic was over. Uh, you know, so it, it just beggars belief, uh, that they, they, they, they went through all this, uh, and, and even worse that they mandated the stuff. I mean, that's, that's the horrendous part here. I mean, and, and the mandates are still in force.

Knowing what we know, knowing the signs that we now know, we all know the mandates are still in place. Look, at the end of the day, uh, Philip, I mean, how could anyone in their right mind look back? I mean, it was, it was fanciful at the time, but how could you have a government that could allow somebody to go to a brothel, but not go to a church?

It's just beyond belief. I mean, these people should be locked up.

Look, you know, we, we hear about the health system in crisis. What health system? We haven't had one for a long time. We've just got a disease management system, but, um, you know, friends of ours had a pretty horrific day yesterday. Uh, our friend had a suspected meningitis attack, or it looked like she had meningitis.

All the symptoms were there, went to the local Bush nursing hospital, got some treatments and tests done there, and then was sent to Lismore Base Hospital. They spent 12 hours at Lismore Base Hospital. Suspected meningitis. And every time they said, can we please get seen? Now it'd be five hours at a time and not be seen.

Can we please be seen? Look, we're doing the best we can. We've got the funding doesn't allow for us to have enough nurses and we don't have enough doctors.

Well. So why are the nurses and paramedics and medical professionals you have in New South Wales sitting on their backsides or making coffee because you won't let them work. And these are people with vast experience who had the gumption and the experience to know that they could say no to something they thought was harmful.

It's called integrity. And there they are with all their combined thousands of years of experience waiting to serve. Waiting to come in. Now that you most need them. There's only one reason you're not. There's two reasons. You're not dropping these mandates and getting them back to work. One of them is pride because you think you're going to look foolish.

Let me tell you, you already look foolish. We have, we have this situation in Canberra, uh, Philip Altman, where two independent senators voted against. For the second time, an inquiry into excess deaths in Australia. Two senators, Jackie Lambie and Lydia Thorpe. Now, why would Jackie Lambie vote no? There can only really be two reasons.

One was she pushed it too hard in the beginning, and an investigation would show that she backed the wrong horse and may have been responsible for killing some of her own constituents. Or she's just plain dumb. I mean, what on earth would possess an independent to vote against something like that? Was it some kind of backroom deal?

Why would you not want to know what's killing fellow Tasmanians, Jackie Lambie? And Lydia Thorpe, you're all blump and luster and you walk in with your fist raised in the air and you're all tough when you're making a statement like that, but when your own people are dying in front of you, you don't even want to acknowledge it and you don't want an investigation.

What are you about? What is wrong with you? Totally critical. And I think we've, we've also got to ask the question, why are the American red cross asking questions about whether you've been vaccinated and if you answer yes to being mRNA vaccinated, they want you to call their hotline before you'll be allowed to come in to give blood.

Yep. Why is that the case?

Yeah. Well, they know now that the spike protein can hang around and the mRNA can hang around for a long time, many months.

Yeah. And what are the flow on effects of that? Because this, you know, Exactly. That, that was another lie. We were told that the, the mRNA vaccine would stay in the arm and disappear very rapidly. Do you remember that? Oh, yeah. Can't cross the blood brain barrier. They said. Yeah. They never had any data to support that.

That was a wish. And now they've been shown that's been shown to be a lie. If you get vaccinated, you won't get COVID. Another lie. If you are vaccinated, you won't die from COVID. If you don't get vaccinated, you will die of COVID. Well, here's three living anti vaxxers. And it's now, it's, Now showing that the more you've been vaccinated, the more damage is being done to your immune system.

It's those people who are most susceptible to, uh, COVID getting reinfected with COVID. Um, and it, uh, it does occur after about the third injection, the first two, and then, then a booster. Um, some, some people had two or three boosters. So, their immune system is not probably in great shape. Well, and you've only got to speak to the Pfizer executives.

They didn't even want to have the, uh, the product that was given to the public. They brought in their own drug to give to their own employees. Yeah. That tells you But why, why were the politicians exempt? Why was the judiciary exempt? And their staff. And their, and their staff.

Yet they mandated, uh, people like myself out of the court. We weren't allowed to go and give evidence unless we were double vaccinated.

A few pregnant pauses in our broadcast tonight, gentlemen. And I think they're poignant ones, poignant ones. I mean, we are, we're getting, we, we are passing the point of no return. You know, I had a conversation, I've had several conversations with my wife, Michelle, and I'm sure, I don't know, John, whether you've had with Caitlin, but a friend of ours said today, you guys, are you worried about being arrested one day?

Not worried about it. If it happens, it happens, but we put plans in place. Michelle knows what to do if I get carted off just because I'm saying stuff like this. This is Australia. Why on earth would law abiding citizens make plans in case one of you gets arrested for speaking the truth or speaking out or asking somebody else to speak the truth?

I might be better off in there, Hootie. At least I'd have a job. Making number plates, Johnny. Yeah. Unbelievable. Unbelievable. Philip, what's on the horizon for you with your sub stack? Um, you do, you still do a lot of research. You're pumping this stuff out. What's, uh, what's noteworthy for you? What are you really looking for at the moment?

Look, um, the information is coming from a lot of quarters. There's a lot of people, a lot of literature to sift through. And I just try and sift through the literature as best I can and distribute some of the more important bits and pieces. The thing on the amyloid plaques was really important over the last week or so.

Um, but, but of course, there's the, uh, this, uh, uh, meeting with the, uh, legal and constitutional committee in Canberra concerning possible terms of reference, uh, for a royal commission, uh, into COVID. And, um, a lot of people have put an enormous amount of work in the original document that was submitted. Uh, to the committee, uh, was something like 130 pages long and there were probably more than 50 contributors to it.

Um, there were questions on notice that were raised and those are being answered now, um, uh, by individuals, by experts in various areas. Um, so, so watch that space. But, you know, I think there's going to be huge resistance to having a Royal Commission because neither side of the politics really want the truth to be known.

Uh, they want people to just forget it and move on that. That's the strategy. And they're just hanging on, uh, by, by their fingernails, right. And, and hoping to, to hang on for a few more years and walk away with a pension or. Um, you notice the premiers have, uh, basically all left. I think they saw the writing on the wall.

Um, there's just too much information that's coming through now. Um, and, and they're just stonewalling it. Uh, but people were in trouble. People were suffering. And it's so sad to see your fellow Australians. Being gas lit and stonewalled and not being looked after. We deserve better than this. Police commissioner in Queensland, Katrina Carroll has pulled the pin too, John.

I mean, they're, uh, they're running like, uh, rats off a sinking ship, but, um. But then they appoint people like Hazzard to be the chairman of CareFlight. I mean, you know, it's, it just beggars belief what goes on. I mean, this, this woman will go into some other job. She'll get some consultancy gig. Uh, hazards on a 300,000 a year pension for life.

I mean, what's he need to go over there for? Uh, well, maybe you could take over Woolies, John. Teddy bear sales aren't going to go up, are they? Well, his wife works for Woolies. Yeah. On the checkout? No, she's a, she's a high, high flying manager with the Woolworths. Uh, it's crazy stuff. What have they just done?

Lost three quarters of a billion dollars in one of the, one of the most, uh, lucrative grocery markets in the world. Well, I can tell you, I, I'm not really an activist. You know, most people think I'm really outspoken. I've never been an activist, right? Me either. I'm sitting here, 2019, very happy. You know, not a, not a care in the world.

I've never spoken to an audience in, in my life, right? Hate doing it. At any rate, I was so upset with what Woolies had been doing. I went into my local Woolies in Neutral Bay, where I've shopped for probably 30 years. And I asked to speak to the manager. And I was very polite and he did show up and I introduced myself.

I just said, uh, I'm just a shopper, but I've been shopping here for 30 years. And I said, I'm really, really disappointed in, uh, the stance that bullies have taken toward the public. And they look to me to be very unpatriotic. And I said, as a result, I will never come through these doors again. I will go elsewhere.

And he said, I understand. I won't, won't name him, but he said, I understand. He said, you're not the only one who's, who's, who's come in. People are marching with their feet. Well, I had the same conversation with APRA the other day on the telephone. And, uh, you know, the, the, the young girl that I was speaking to, uh, uh, was very sympathetic.

Uh, in fact, she actually made some comments, which, which I was, was very surprised about. Um, To the extent where I was of the view that she believed that the vaccines were harmful. Uh, so I, I think this is going on everywhere. Uh, I think there's, there's everyone knows somebody that knows somebody that, uh, has got a story to tell, uh, about some backroom deal or they're not speaking up.

They know what's going on, but nobody wants to put their hand up and, and take responsibility for all this. I don't know where these corporate giants. Uh, went from selling, uh, baked beans to deciding what we should vote for or what we should think. Uh, it, it is just madness and you know, they are representing thousands of staff, thousands of customers.

Why they think that it's their responsibility to conquer and divide and upset people that come into their shop, uh, for the sake of being trendy to some. It is beyond ridiculous. Well, well, Johnny, it's, it's happened before in history. It's called corporatism, public private partnerships, and it didn't end well in the 1930s.

That's fascism. That's the definition of fascism. When governments, bureaucracies and corporations work together for the common good, the common good of who? The government, the corporations and the bureaucracies. Not the people. This is bizarre stuff. We live in incredible times and we live, you know, many of us have been employed by corporations who've been more involved in social engineering than they have been in running a business.

Yeah. And this Woolies is paying the price. This covid thing has made ordinary people like myself really start to think about what's really going on in the world in a lot of areas, not just. Uh, medical health areas, but in lots of areas, you now have to start to question everything because there's been, I believe, unfortunately, a massive loss of trust, certainly in the medical profession.

I mean, that is tragic. That is tragic. I'm not sure that the trust will come back in a, in a generation. It's that serious. People just don't believe now. A lot of people, not, not everyone, but a lot of people just distrust doctors. You, you always distrusted the politicians, right? Or your tax accountant, you know, you always wondered about things.

But, but, but your doctor and, and scientists, do you dis, you You know, you have to really worry about scientists now, you know, when you start to talk about climate change and stuff. I tell you what, you have to critically think, but you can't critically think if you're really, really scared. You lose that ability to critically think.

When you're frightened, your brain works differently. It certainly does fight or flight. Well, I think we're going to hell in a hand basket. I don't know how, I mean, Kaitlin went to the doctor the other day, had to book in in Wagga, uh, because she couldn't get into the doctor in, in Chairman, 75 out of pocket expense for a lesson, 10 minute consultation to get a blood form.

It was absolutely absurd. Uh, and then I'm aware of people that are, that are ringing their doctor and saying, I want to make an appointment. And they say, they're being asked, what's your name? Uh, no, you're not on the list. I've been coming there for 10 years, but you haven't been here within the last two years.

So we've wiped you off the screen. You're not considered it. We're not taking any new patients. I mean, this is the sort of stuff that's going on. Uh, my daughter's just started university in Wollongong. One textbook, 400. One textbook to park at the university, 20 a day. I mean, who can afford this stuff?

Welcome to Australia. We're going wrong. And Albanese's flying around. It's so easy to see it. The three of us can see it. Yeah. The three of us can see it. And this grub Albanese's flying around in VIP RAAF jets to Taylor Swift concerts. I mean, I just feel like going, you're a disgrace. I found out the other day he was the, uh, president of the Young Communists at university.

Of course he was. You should call him Marxist Albanese. Unbelievable. Anyway, gentlemen, we better bring this to a close. It's been great catching you up again, Dr. Phil, and we love having you on for this. We haven't had an Altman report since last year, but you took a little bit of time out and don't mind, uh, you know, we were just here slaving over a hot camera again while you were enjoying yourself.

And, um, but it's great to have you back on. And I think we should, we need all the help we can get. So let's talk to God, shall we? Dear Lord, father in heaven, you've been listening to our comments. You know, our hearts. You know our thoughts, you know our motives, Father God. Guide and lead us in the ways everlasting.

Guide and lead us into truth, knowing that, as you said in John 8, 32, know the truth and that truth will set you free. And for those who believe in you, Lord, you are the truth. So please guide and lead us with wisdom, grace, and mercy. Help us to be compassionate, even against those who we see as doing the wrong thing and those who hate upon us.

May we live in compassion and truth, we ask in Jesus holy name. Amen. Amen. Thanks for coming on, Philip, and let's get you on in a month or so and get another update. Unless you've got something more that you want to talk about before then, then please contact us. We're happy to put you to air. We've got to get, we've got to get him a Club Grubbery shirt hoodie.

I mean, he's, he's got to be, he's part of the furniture now, isn't he? Yeah, we do. We do. See to it, will you, Johnny? See to it. Okay. You know where I live. Are you still there? Yeah. I'm still here. We, we haven't moved yet. All right. Well, God bless you, Phillip. And so much, Johnny Lardy. You've often been heard to say.

You just couldn't make this stuff up. No way. Could you stay out of the trees, everybody? Don't forget what you did yesterday. Got you to today. Bye. Bye. Bye. Don't live in fear, don't go mining for darkness, you know, there's plenty of stuff lying on the surface. You don't have to go underground to see stupidity and corruption at its core.

So remember the sun comes up, the sun goes down, it's been beautiful weather, it's been hot and sticky, but find a beach, find a creek, have a swim, relax. And we'll see you next time on Club Grubby with another great interview. Thanks for supporting us and we'll see you soon. Bye for now.
