Club Grubbery - Raw transcript of interview:

2025-05-27 Graham speaks with ACA representatives John Larter and Katie Ashby-Koppens.

Well, good morning everybody. I say good morning. It's Thursday, the 22nd of May. It's a beautiful, sunny day. I am just north of the flooded areas of, uh. Central North coast of New South Wales, our commiserations and prayers go out to all those people and we've had rain for three months pretty much. And, uh, everything's green and lush and very spongy underfoot.

But welcome to Club Grubby everybody. And, um, to today's episode is all about the Align Council of Australia and the World Health Organization. And we have an expert panel on, uh, this morning to guide us through the machinations of, uh, the decisions being made by the Communist Australian government on your behalf.

First of all, I'd like to introduce the chairman of the A CA Mr. John Larter, Esquire, who is also co-founder of Club Grubby and Australia's Chief Grub Hunter. Uh, John Larter. Welcome to the show.

Well, thank you. Hoodie, hoodie, we're, we must be in good speaking terms and co-founder and, uh, and, and, uh, legal, legal power behind the aligned Council of Australia.

Katie Ashby, Coppins. Great to see you. Smiling face, Katie.

Mm, morning. Morning Graham. Morning John.

Well, we've just been discussing prior to going to air the ramifications of several videos that we'll be posting. Uh, in conjunction with this interview, uh, we wanna unpack what's going on over in Geneva, but first of all, I want to talk about a couple of key players.

Uh, first of all, uh, of course we have our own Penny Wong, and, uh, she made she ingratiated Australia before the World Health Organization in one of the most sickening speeches I've ever heard. Um, I, look, I'm, I, uh. I, I know that Penny Wong is a very, very capable person because she's, uh, managed to wangle her way into a position of great power and authority.

And, uh, no dummy can do that, but she's managed to do it. Her motives are su are very suspect in my eyes, because we know that. Uh, that she has close affiliations with the Chinese Communist Party. We're sure of that. Uh, and, uh, we know from talking to Trevor Loudon, the author of the book, uh, comrade Prime Minister that Penny Wong and Mark Butler and, uh, Anthony Albanese, just to name a few, uh, very closely linked with outcomes that would only benefit.

The Communist Party in China, and we saw in Melbourne, uh, John and Katie, how, uh, and various other locations where she held, uh, events pre-election for Chinese community members only I. Anybody else, any other ethnicity was excluded. It was for Chinese people only. And Trevor Loudon alluded to that on our show last night.

So that's the first thing I want to talk about. Then we want to talk about, uh, Jane Holton. Now she is a viper that has been slithering her way through the halls of, uh, government for many years. She's got a her, uh, a venom. Has, uh, has infiltrated pretty much every, uh, social and public department in the country, and she has a major influence over that and she's never had to front up for a vote.

And then of course we have, uh, Dr. Ted Ross, the amazing Dr. Ted Ross. We need to ask the question, how do, as a ma, how does a Marxist communist, uh, from, uh, from North North Africa find himself into the top job in the World Health Organization? What are his qualifications or better still, what is his agenda?

So a lot to unpack as well as where this WHO stuff is going and where we stand with the IHR. So welcome to you both and let's unpack all that from the beginning. Let's talk about Penny Wong. Katie, what did you think of that speech?

Well, uh, I wasn't surprised because of course we had last year, uh, Mark Butler appearing making similar, um, overtures.

Uh, but look, it's, uh, incredible the, uh, blanket, uh, welcome that the entire pandemic treaty is getting, uh, to Australian shores. It's incredible. Now, I do appreciate that Australia had a, um, assistant or someone working on the international negotiating, um, body for that document. Uh, but look the way that it's being welcomed, uh, open arms and possibly the most infuriating part, infuriating part of that speech was the comments around COVID did this, no, COVID didn't do any of this.

The public health response did this, and these documents are paving the way for this public health response to go unchecked forever with perpetual pandemics that the WHO will get to declare, and Australia will just follow, follow all the recommendations.

Unbelievable. Johnny Lader, uh, do we want Dr.

Tedros, uh, prescribing our medications for us?

Uh, well, definitely not hoodie. Uh, I mean the, the, the clear and present danger is the WHO Senator Ron Johnson said that on our show. Uh, so. Uh, we've got the New Zealand government standing up to these thugs. Uh, they're saying that they, they want to, they wanna be independent.

We've got the US government saying they're exiting the who, uh, and, and going about, uh, doing that. We've got, uh, the reform, um, party in the uk, Nigel Farage, uh, who have the overwhelming support of the, uh, British people at the moment. Uh, they're, they're championing, um, either a, a, a massive reform to the, to the WLHO or an exit from it.

So, no, um, we, we don't, um, and, and you can understand now hoodie, why I think there's been reticence to engage in any sort of, uh, review of the COVID era because as we can see, clearly see in Wong's, uh, speech. Uh, they want to use the COVID situation to bolster, uh, their efforts in getting this grubby act through so they can maintain controllers.

I.

It's a frightening prospect, Katie. Um, you know, the election result in Australia was a stunning, uh, defeat, I'm not gonna say a stunning win for labor because 34% of the population voted for them and 66% didn't. But it's a stunning defeat of, uh, of conservative politics in this country. Um, which many political pundits are saying has exposed us to another 10 years of hard labor.

Um, this isn't gonna get any better under this government, is it?

No. In fact, it's going to go get worse, and I would say unchecked.

Sorry, I've got nothing more to add to that one. It's gonna be quite incredible. So we'll have a situation where federally, they'll bring this in and then all of the states will implement it in their particular different ways. And that will be possibly like we see in Western Australia with, with the legislation over there, which allows, uh, a medical authority, um, or authorized person and a police officer, uh, if the medical authorized person decides, uh, to forcibly, uh, vaccinate you.

So we could start seeing those kinds of things happening at state level. We already saw the rollout of, uh, the COVID health response at the different state levels and how incredibly different they were, but look. That all happened without these documents, so goodness knows, uh, uh, what, um, whether they needed any more justification, perhaps they would need more justification now, because people were a little bit more cluey.

Okay, so, um, there, there were agreements reached by I think 128 nations at the, in Geneva the other day. What are those, what do those agreements mean? And uh, and where do we stand in relation to the international health regulation? How much time have we got to do anything about that?

Yeah, sure. So that was 123 countries voted and 11 abstained.

Okay. Now really interesting, there are 194 member states minus the US that left 193 member states had all member states turned up. They would not have got this treaty across the line. It needed a two thirds majority, which would've been 1 29 votes. They only got 1 23 or 1 24, but. Remember they're saying all of this that's being done for equity and solidarity.

Where did all the other countries go? Why was there, you know, 40 or so, um, or 50 or so missing countries? Well, it turns out a whole lot of countries weren't allowed to vote, get this, uh, in the name of equity because they hadn't paid their fees.

So look, there's some really, um, things, questionable things. I'm trying to get to the bottom of the numbers. I'm trying to get to the bottom of the 11 countries that abstained. I don't have that complete list. I'm still missing three countries. Uh, but they'll be doing, oh, it's a consensus vote. It was unanimous.

Uh, you know, and that's the way that they get the message through. Uh, but when you look at it, not, not all of the countries voted.

Unbelievable. Well, that tells you the modus operandi of these grubs hoodie. I mean here, here we have it. The WHO. Uh, you know, if, if you ask the average punter on the street what this mob's about, they would say about providing, uh, uh, healthcare, um, to, to countries that can't afford it, uh, that, that have a lower standard of, of living than Australia.

And essentially Australia is there at the table, and I'm, we're overpaying. I'm sure we're overpaying. Um, so we should be dealing these countries in that can't afford it. But here we have a situation where they're dealt out because they haven't paid their bills. Uh, and the, uh, tedros of the world, uh, are using that now to make these, uh, these egregious, uh, decisions that will basically end up locking us up.

And interestingly, those countries that, um, weren't allowed to vote or perhaps weren't allowed to vote because they hadn't paid their fees are the ones that might have voted no to the agreement because, uh, they would like more free medications and they've got some very, um, delicious or juicy pathogens of pandemic potential that they might be required to share with the WHO under the pandemic agreement.

Uh, so, you know, they could have been the ones to hold up the. Um, the vote and so, or, or take away the unanimous statement. So you know, who's to say that, um, that wasn't a good reason to just sideline them. They can't afford the fees, so let's just cut them out. But they've got a whole lot of things we want.

Uh, and they might have said no to our agreement.

And, and what about, uh, what about Dr. John, what do you know about Ted Ross?

Well, not a great deal hoodie, to be completely honest. Um, I just know anyone that, uh, heads up these organizations, uh, are, are, uh, are certainly people that you wouldn't, uh, have round to your dinner table.

Uh, you know, that's, that's the bottom line. Uh, you, you know, if they're in there, uh, and, and they're maneuvering in those circles, they're not, they're not, uh, for the public, they're not for the people. So, yeah, he's obviously someone that can't be trusted. You know, it's like Albanese, when you've got Bill Gates lobbying into your, uh, to your taxpayer punted home, looking over the harbor, you've gotta say to yourself, well, why is this bloke here?

Uh, why, why are those associating with these people? Um, and we know the answers. They're, they're just complete grubs.

Absolutely. What do you know about him, Katie?

Oh, look, probably as much as you, uh, and what you mentioned in the intro, uh, he's certainly got, uh, webs everywhere. Uh, he has, um, uh, uh, contacts or has been part of, of some form of African terrorist nation.

Yeah. Uh, that's really the extent of my knowledge because. A lot of the time these guys are just the puppets, um, and the ones that are put up there and stupid enough to put their face at the front of the organization, whereas they're just having, um, you know, just the webs are twisted behind them and, and holding them in place.

As Trevor Loudin said, he's a, he, he did head up a, a, a terrorist revolutionary organization in Ethiopia. He was, um, uh, he is a Marxist, there's no doubt about that, but he's a very unremarkable person in the global sense if it weren't for his, his, uh, chair position in the WHO. Um, yes. So let's unpack how someone like Ted Ross might get there.

Who is the largest. Uh, non-country member of the WHO that provides most of the funds.

So there isn't, it's not a membership per se, it's what they do is they provide additional contributions. So the way that the World Health Organization was set up originally was member states would join. This was after, uh, world War ii, uh, and it was decided that there was the need to.

Bring countries together. So the United Nations are formed. And then the WHO, the World Health Organization is a branch off the United Nations responsible for health and more and more nations, uh, joined up over that time to get to the point of 194 member nations. The member nations were the ones that were always contributing money in the form of assessed contributions, and that was the ones that the, um, African Nations hadn't paid, which was why they couldn't vote.

So assessed contributions are the number of. About dollars that each country is assessed to provide the WHO each year. The assessed contributions is why America's just got out because it said we are paying much more, uh, assessed contributions than China. And so they were going along quite nicely. The problem was, is that the assessed contributions just didn't seem to be quite enough.

So they started up this concept of voluntary contributions so that countries could give, um, additional money voluntarily. Now, in addition to the 12 million, um, that, uh, we American that we pay over the next two years, penny Wong also just gave a hundred million dollars to the WHO voluntarily of our taxpayers money Now.

How that's come about and what's that all made up of? We don't exactly know, but what this does is it paves these voluntary contributions paved the way for private public partnerships where private entities and organizations can donate money through this voluntary assess, uh, sorry, voluntary contribution portal.

And so as a consequence of that, we've started to get, um, pharmaceutical industries, um, s uh, supporting, uh. The, um, voluntary contributions through these public private partnerships. We've got Germany, who's one of the biggest funders of the WHO through voluntary, uh, partnerships, and they've got a, a huge pharmaceutical, um.

Uh, business, uh, model that sits behind them. But interestingly, there's also organizations such as the philanthropic, uh, ones that philanthropic, uh, such as the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. So we've got a situation now that the WH is o is actually 25% funded by. Organizations that are not member states and have a very significant interest in, uh, decisions made by the WHO, which may line their profit pockets, uh, in the future.

Which single country contributes more than any other to the WHO?

I think it's Germany at the moment. Um, US was up there, but they've stopped contributing. Uh, so it's Germany.

Okay. The CCP were heavily involved as well. China.

Yeah, but they don't pay.

How does that work?

This is why the US is so annoyed.

China pays a minuscule amount compared to the us. So Trump's got the PIP about that and said no. Well, the US is getting out. China doesn't contribute nearly as much as we do, so you know, you guys can have it.

Mm-hmm. See the, um, let's, let's look at a couple of other key players, uh, for, for example, Jane Halton.

Um. Jane Halton has her tentacles throughout every single organization. She was the architect of no jab, no play, uh, just to name a few. She seems to be the go-to bureaucrat John in Canberra, uh, for all of these grubs, you know, she's connected, uh, she's connected by blood to a great many, uh, influential people in government in this country.

And she seems to have the ear of everybody in power. How does she do it and what's her main game?

Well, I think at the end of the day, whaty, these, these people are, uh, are essentially very greedy. Uh, and, and they love the control and power. That's, that's essentially where I think it sits. Uh, yes, uh, she's probably one of many, um, that.

That work, uh, uh, behind the scenes. Um, and, and, and, you know, let's look at that organization we uncovered, uh, during COVID, um, the Burnett Institute. I mean, he, here's another one, uh, professor Crab, uh, Brendan, was it Brendan Crab, whatever his name was. I mean, he was, uh, on, on a, b, c news every second day, uh, telling people to get.

Get vaccinated, uh, using his, uh, background as a, as an immunologist or whatever he was. Now when you dive into the financials of that, uh, burn in Burnett Institute, it was getting millions and millions of dollars of funding from the federal government through, uh, the Department of Foreign Affairs and all sorts of places, dfat, uh, I mean, and then they were setting up these, uh, these interior, uh, silos, uh, to essentially.

Look after all the back of house stuff in relation to, uh, testing, um, for COVID and, and, and the like. So you, you can't trust any of them. Um, there, there needs to be a a, an inquiry in into these people. I mean, a EO should be all over this. This is, this is now this treason. What is going on? I don't know what else you call it.

I mean, these people are not acting in the interests of Australia or Australia's sovereignty or its people. They're treasonous. I don't care what anyone says. Um, and it applies to so many of them. Um, I mean, even Penny Wong, I mean, what she said in that, um, uh, place, uh, is treasonous no call a spade as spade.

Yeah. Katie, uh, Jane Halton, uh, came out recently and said that the vaccine saved at least 8 million lives.

Mm mm Yes. Supposedly. You can make that number up if it's the number that you've modeled and to say what it saved.

Unbelievable. And, and so what do you know about Jane Halton?

Look, what I do know is possibly a bit more along the lines of gossip as opposed to, uh, concrete information.

But, uh, whenever, um, uh, something sinister or along these lines comes up, uh, it's like whack-a-mole and there she is. Uh, and she's. I'd understood that she'd had involvement in the, um, uh, pandemic, uh, practice run that was, uh, conducted in, uh, 2019 just before COVID. Mm-hmm. Um, I would like to note that there's been a recent, uh, another, uh, practice run for a a, a pandemic, and that was for a.

Uh, pathogen that's released from a wooly mammoth or something that is, uh, uh, exhumed, um, in some sort of, uh, process for discovering, uh, it, so that was, that one was just held, I think in April. So watch the space, uh, and then, um. When it came down to the Pfizer contracts, uh, she was all over the ones in New Zealand to the extent that no other, uh, vaccine was supplied in New Zealand except for Pfizer.

Uh, so that's the extent of my knowledge of her, but, um, nobody's had anything to say. Nice.

She shadow, we figure she, and she plays, uh, I mean she eats at the same table as Albanese now, and she ate at the same table as Scott Morrison. Uh, she floats in and outta these political parties, whoever's in power, probably the highest paid bureaucrat in Australia, John.

And,

but see, this is what's amazing hoodie. None of these people are held accountable in regards to their financial background. A and this is what stinks. I mean, uh, the premier, former premier in New South Wales, Barry Farrell lost his job over a bottle of wine. That was probably undrinkable. Uh, and, and these people have got, you know, who knows, have they got a million, uh, Pfizer shares?

Uh, we wanna know. I mean, because see these things, um, you know, at a local government level are, are very, very. Critical. They enforce it and they say, right, you've gotta do your pecuniary interests. Uh, you've gotta tell us whether you, whether you own a motorcar when you drive on public roads and all this sort of nonsense.

But when it comes to this stuff, I mean, how do we know that these people are not, uh, being paid by these organizations and therefore there's a massive bias? And of course there is. We know. Uh, but, but they're not obliged to do it now they should be. So it stops.

Well, we know that, we know that our own TGA is 95% funded by Big Pharma.

That that is a, that is a warning sign if ever there was one that we are the most heavily funded by Big Pharma TGA in the world, the Australian one is, and, but I, I guess something's happened in Geneva in the last week, uh, Katie Esby Coppins. And to me it just seems like it was a big backslapping exercise to say, how great were we and how great are the World Health Organization?

The, the results of those, of that vote of confidence means exactly what, and where do we go from here after that?

Yeah, sure. Look, you've got to remember who's there. They are people that get paid and have careers in public health. They need those careers to continue. Uh, David Ba, uh, Dr. David Bell, Australian and, uh, former WHO uh, scientist actually says we need less.

Uh, public health, uh, physicians than more, uh, because of this exact reason they're looking for. Work. And so we can see this with, um, complaints about the money, uh, us uh, aid and support falling away from the WHO and lo and behold, that money's being pulled away from, uh, you know, malaria projects and all sorts of other projects that are on the ground projects, but reduction in bureaucrats.

No. So that's, that's the kind of situation that we've got here. So all of those people that were up there, back, back slapping are all people that are. Paid by our governments. They are, um, uh, in the area of public health, they want to see this, um, uh, fly. They think public health is a massive risk and they've got their blinkers on.

They're the ones that have all of these crack up sayings. Like, no one's safe to, we're all safe. And they feel that they're ones, they're the ones that need to, uh, look after that safety. So, you know, this. Equity, solidarity, inclusion, all of that nonsense is just permeating this organization. That's the people that work there, that's the people that wanna see these documents get up.

And they have probably not really lived in the real world, uh, at any time because they're in their lovely little ivory castles, uh, in Geneva or maybe in Canberra. And that's the reality of how these documents get up. And the thing is, is it's happened really quietly. There's been, uh, very little media, uh, I believe Penny Wong and, uh, Butler released a media release yesterday, uh, to announce it.

I haven't seen it being picked up in much of the mainstream media. And if it was, it would be sold as great because guess what? A lot of people still think that COVID, uh, you know, was really, really, really bad. Uh, and so. We've got the situation that this document's being accepted. What does it mean for us here in Australia?

Well, fortunately the document can't be signed for another year. Uh, I don't think it should have been voted on at all because it was incomplete. It was incomplete because it's missing the. Pathogen access benefit sharing schedule. Now, why would we need a pathogen access benefit sharing schedule? Well, apparently, uh, we need to supply all of, uh, our nasty pathogens to the WHO lab.

They then get to conduct whatever research on it that they wish. The February 20, 24 version of, uh, the path, uh, the Pandemic Treaty actually referred to, um, uh. Gain a function research and what the WHHO would do around regulating that. Uh, and then lo and behold, we might have, you know, another lab leak or, you know, the next pathogen does arise.

And the WHO gets to declare the, um, pandemic. They then get to declare or recommend the solution, which our countries are gonna, uh, um, uh, lap up. So we've got this. Self-fulfilling prophecy under this document, which I think is the most alarming, uh, part of the document. Then what's setting up in place is all the commercial and logistical infrastructure in place so that they can get those vaccines, the a hundred day vaccines to you so much quicker.

Uh, and that's why we've got Moderna that's been constructed in Australia and Melbourne that can, uh, or boast the ability to develop a hundred, uh, million vaccines a year. And those. Uh, facilities have gone up around the world, uh, and everywhere. So the only saving graces that we've got a year before it needs to be signed.

We need to ensure that it's not signed, uh, and we need to ensure that more people learn about it and more people hear about it. So it's all about jobs to let people know, Hey, did you hear that there's new pandemic, um, treaty documents being done? And to actually ask people about it, see what they know, and you don't need to pepper them with lots of data.

Just let them know what, what, what, what's planned under it. And we've got a lot of information really simply, um, explained on the Aligned Council of Australia website, uh, that exploits both the Pandemic Treaty and the regulations.

You know, it reminds me, um, reminds me of a Bond movie. You remember James Bond nemesis was always that organization called Specter. When you think of the World Health Organization, the way you've described it, U2 today, it just reminds me of Specter out for global domination. And, um, it is so sinister. It's beyond, it's beyond belief that other people, you know, people, all the people of the world aren't t tweaking to this.

It's only a minority of people that are, that are actually even interested in it. I've just had, uh, a message to say. A news article to say that the Queensland government is set to destroy all of its COVID data.

Mm-hmm. Yes, correct.

Now, why would they do that? They keep data on everything else. Why would they want to destroy their COVID data?

Well, that's because the Queensland University have been doing a project, uh, which they're wanting to halt.

Yes. We've got a similar project that's halted in New Zealand on the basis of funding. But this is, they're going one step further in, uh, Queensland, and they're actually looking to destroy the samples.

Exactly.

Now, destroying samples is pretty incredible. There is requirements to keep, um, samples, you know, if you go and get your blood tested, uh, that blood's held onto it for a very, very, very long time. Goodness gracious. I'd hate to imagine the storage facilities, uh, and what's involved yet these, uh, Queensland, um, is making very clear noises about actually destroying it.

So my boss, pj, um, O'Brien and Julian have been, uh, writing to, uh, the Queensland, uh, uh, government, or sorry, university, to let them know that they can't actually, uh, destroy it and that that information will be needed, uh, one day and potentially soon.

It's incredible, isn't it?

It is incredible. It really is.

But look, we know the data doesn't say what they want to. We know the real life experience. I've just had another two people, um, close to me. Um, a now, uh, pronounced with stage four cancers at various places. Uh, you know, there's people falling left, right, and center, and it's numbers far beyond, uh, what I've ever experienced before.

Gigi Foster in our interview yesterday with her and, uh, Ian Bright, hope John declared that the, the next major meltdown will probably, once again be, uh, a health meltdown in the world. May not be financial or whatever, but it will be a health meltdown. Um, and, uh, we are so as a nation, as, as the citizens of this great country, we are so unprepared for it.

We are, we are, but we can do a lot for ourselves. And that is get healthy, make sure we are living a good life. Mm-hmm. Be resilient from all of this crap because, you know, we can, we can be resilient. We don't need to be living it before it's actually even arrived. And we be resilient by being, by not being reliant, you know, we have our communities.

We've lost so much. We've lost touch with our communities and so important to be a part of them because we are only gonna be able to save each other at the end of the day.

And dy look, let's, let's, let's look at it. I mean, if people think this isn't possible, I mean, we've interviewed, uh, you remember we did the interview with the Brazilians, uh, not long back.

Um, identifying that they were being charged, uh, with a $30,000 fine for not vaccinating their, their, their children. Uh, um. You know, these are poor people, so it's going on. We've got the incident in Singapore where Bill Gates arrives on his aircraft and then within days they pass a law, uh, that says if you do not comply with vaccination, you could be jailed for up to six months.

I. I think it's 12 months on a repeat, um, uh, offense. So, I mean, you know, that that's a, that's clear indication of what's going on. If anyone out there is thinking, geez, this, these things, uh, sound a bit too made up, um, and, and look at W'S legislation, they've actually got it embedded into their state legislation as we speak, that they can essentially go into your home and force vaccination on you.

Mm-hmm. So if you don't think that this is going to come to a town near you, under, under this, uh, specter organization, uh, called the who that, uh, hoodie is rightly referred to them as you, you're mistaken. Um, look what happened with Brad Hazzard. Brad Hazzard. Uh, for all intents and purposes, most people thought he was a, a reasonable bloke, but he, he took power to a new extreme in New South Wales.

He, uh, introduced a public health order that essentially locked everyone down, and he alone had the power to do that. The, the, the state, uh, parliament essentially, uh, given him the ability to make, make those laws, uh, in a pandemic. And this is, this is how they operate.

I'd like to get Winston Peters on from New Zealand.

Katie, um, I've got a contact, sorry.

We can only ask, I know, as Chief of Staff, well, if you could do that for us, it'd be greatly appreciated. All we wanna do is talk about the reasons why New Zealand said, uh, no to the WHO. Uh, we don't wanna go any on any other topic line with him, but we'd love to have him on.

Um, so, uh, yeah, if, if you could arrange that, we'd be very appreciative and we'd like to get you back on with him if that happens.

Oh, sure. I certainly try.

Yeah. Okay. So how is the Align Council going?

Yeah, good. We're up to, uh, 38, 39 member groups now, uh, 1.8 million people. Uh, we've got a number of different campaigns that have started.

I think we're all licking our wounds, uh, following the, uh, election. Um, and simply the election results, having lost a couple of really good independent souls, uh, that, you know, we're representing all of our, uh, collective interests. Uh, so it's a bit of a, a, a stop. Uh, a, a refresh. I think we all need a bit of a refresh.

I'm feeling damn exhausted after five years and just not relenting, uh, and let's, um, get going and get cracking and become more unified and more aligned. Mm-hmm.

I think the biggest problem with the aligned council at the moment would, if I, to be quite frank, is that, that we really don't have any finances.

And that's, that's, that's the real issue. I mean, there's a great bunch of people there doing great things. Uh, and, and, uh, we, I think we're having a, a, a, a real impact. Um, we're, we're, we're putting out some great stuff. I mean, the, the, uh, people behind the scenes that do a wonderful job, but it's very difficult to penetrate, uh, those places.

Um. Without the finances to do it. And that's, that's the real issue. Um, you know, we, we'd love to put together TV programs, ads. We'd love to do a whole heap of things, uh, but it's just very difficult without the funding. So, um, that's the real issue. And I, and I suppose if you know somebody, I. Somebody, uh, like, like a, like a Clive Palmer, uh, a Gina Reinhardt was interested in, uh, in doing something, uh, outside of the political scene, then, then that would be the place to, to put a, uh, a small donation in because we could do so much with it.

Uh, and, and if Clive Palmer is serious about, um, wanting to leave, uh, a better place for his daughter and his family, uh, then, you know, we, we can help achieve that. I think. Um. But we, uh, we, we can only do what we can do. Uh, social media is a wonderful format as we know, hoodie. Um, we're, we're able to penetrate into those areas, um, and, and, and advise people.

But I, I think it would be handy to be able to get into that mainstream media, uh, area and, and, and just let, let everyone know that's watching the five o'clock news, uh, aware of what's going on.

Forgive my sigh of where to now. I mean, it just every day un unravels another disaster just waiting to happen, doesn't it? And we can't. You're right Katie. We've gotta focus on community. I mean, I'm, I. My desk is facing out a window looking at green pastures and rolling hills and, uh, kangaroos and, and the sun's shining beautifully.

And I'm gonna go out shortly and do a bit of farm work and, and we still live in an amazing country. It's incredible. And we've gotta make sure that we get out of our computers and get out of our lounge rooms and get out into the sunshine and get healthy. To stay strong for what's coming because, you know, we're, we're going, we're in for it.

And, uh, we've gotta be prepared for these things. I'm not talking about doomsday prepping, I'm just talking about being well educated without going down every rabbit hole under the sun. Um, you know, I'm, we're going to this, um, John, we've been invited to this, um, uh, free media summit, uh, on the Gold Coast.

I'm looking forward to that. Uh, I'm thinking about what I might like to talk about and the, the, the thing that really jumps out at me, I've been interacting with a, a certain social media influencer in the last 24 hours who's all about charging the ramparts and we're all gonna be marched off to DEF camps and all that sort of stuff.

And you know what we, we as a freedom. Group of people who are striving to have truth and integrity, reign supreme. We reign on the other side for their fearmongering and fear campaigning. And we are no better. We're no better. I mean, you know, we, we, John, you and I tried desperately not to increase fear levels in people.

Just increase their awareness and remain disciplined to the tasks that we've set ourselves so that we might be able to encroach. In people's living rooms who are about to wake up. In other words, we need to crack into the mainstream media when, whenever we can. And we've had a, a lot of opportunities to do that.

But, um, boy, we can be our own worst enemy. We can really be our own worst enemy, and we are just as guilty of, of, uh, doing the things that we blame the other side for doing. We've got to all come back to a central foundation of truth. Mm-hmm. And until we can do that, there will never be a unity of purpose.

I know there are a lot of people who are lobbying to start up some new freedom political party that will rival, uh, the Greens and the nationals and whatever, but it's got a draw on fresh people, not the people who've been involved in this The last five years we saw in Melbourne, Katie. Uh, just a couple of days ago, a massive turnout of people turning out for farmers and firefighters.

Um, that these are the kinds of things that are gonna rise out of the ashes of what we've done in the last five years that are gonna gel more people who weren't the slightest bit interested in what we were doing over the last five years. Maybe it's, and maybe what we need to do is support them in the best ways that we can, because maybe the whole COVID thing has been so decimated by the mainstream media and propaganda that perhaps, you know, the COVID, uh, freedom mirror is, is dead.

I don't know that it is. But there are other causes rising around taxation around Central Bank digital currency, around digital id, and, um, it, it's looking more and more likely. That the people who are waking up now are gonna be the spear point, and what we need to do is add our experience to that in a rational way to bolster and support them.

What, what are your views on that?

Absolutely. Look, if I had, um, 20,000, $30,000, what I would do is I would sit here, I would do a couple of different, um, sessions on how the United Nations, uh, 17 sustainability goals are all linked to what's going on here. So this recent huge fine that's being put on properties, uh, for, uh, under the guise of fire.

Uh, you know, this is an all, all fits within these un sustainability goals. They want us off their land. They want, um, uh, people to be living in cities, 15 minute cities. They want us only using 5% of the environment so they can do everything, um, else that they want. And the digital currency, the tracking, tracing, the gender equality, all of this fits within.

These UN sustainability goals, which is essentially total go globalist control. The World Health Organization, the pandemic treaties, they all slot into these 17 UN sustainability goals. And while they look like a pretty rainbow, they're actually a dark, nasty, sinister color scheme. And they're doing a lot of, uh, undercurrent, uh uh, that's.

Peppered all through our councils, that's peppered all through our state, um, uh, state, uh, governments and certainly peppered well through our federal governments. And it's all being played out. So you don't necessarily have to say, well, that's not my issue. If you deal with it under the umbrella of the UN sustainability goals, it's all of our issues.

It's all of the reasons why we're all gonna be on a universal income. And it sounds. Cracked, but it's all by design. Our properties being converted to, uh, electronic titles perhaps so they can be easier, much easily taken away. Uh, you know, there's all sorts of different ideas, but there is certainly a desire that we will own nothing and be happy.

So whatever the cause it is, jump on board. If it has a flavor that you know that is coming from that globalist perspective, then jump on board. It is all of our fight to have.

Well, it sure is. So we, we watch and wait and, uh, it's been really great to chat about these things even though they're a little bit distasteful.

But awareness, uh, you know, if, if you, if you've got cancer or you've got some other life-threatening disease, you can't fix it if you, if you pretend it's not there. Uh, it'll end up killing you. So, um, more power to you both. Um, it's really good, John, talking to you in this, in this format as, as you are the, uh, chair of the a CA and, and, uh, we've known your passion for a long, long time.

Uh, and, um, you know that there's a lot of information out there that we need to, we need to pull together. So let's do that. Let's get the, um, let's get the a CA really as funded as we can get it. And let's try and pull it all together for the good of the people of Australia and New Zealand. Before we go, Katie, what's, what's the latest on what's happening in New Zealand?

Where are they standing with all of this? Are they, are they on the mend?

Look, new Zealand's doing a lot of great things at the moment, uh, driven mostly by, um, you know, lobbying with New Zealand first and really informing them because they honestly don't have a clue about the impacts and of a lot of these documents.

So, at the moment we've got. Royal Commission phase two, which is happening, which is on vaccines vaccine safety mandates. We had to have a phase two because the phase one didn't cover any of those key issues. Uh, so I'm actually traveling to New Zealand next week to appear before the Royal Commission on one of, uh, big submissions that we've just done, which is very exciting.

Mm-hmm. Uh, and then also we've got the situation where, uh, New Zealand first has said that these pandemic treaties, uh, you know, we will retain our sovereignty, but we'll go through an national interest assessment first. Now. That's a bit So what, because all treaties need to go through a national interest assessment.

What the important things is, is the right person goes through the national interest assessment and the right departments. And in my submission to New Zealand first is it's not just for the uh, department of Finance, but the. Human Rights Commission, uh, the Attorney General, uh, to look at the sovereignty issues because there are certainly sovereignty issues, uh, under these documents.

Uh, to go to, um, the privacy Commissioner because we are about to lose a whole lot of our private information to the surveillance, the tracking, the tracing, and the testing that's gonna be going on. And that information will need to be shared with WHO. So look, it's, uh, a lot of things still happening. Uh, but you know, in New Zealand also we've got a massive push with the digital ID coming in with the under sixteens.

So very much the same playbook, different time zones, slightly between Australia and New Zealand as to when things are happening. But the push is just as great, uh, over there in lots of respects. We can only keep pushing back and it feels like a lot more people are, um, awake for on a per, per capita basis in New Zealand.

And that's because perhaps the pains hurt them much quicker because it's a much smaller population.

Yeah, and look, there is, there is definitely a real bond across the ditch. Uh, Katie, we saw that when John and I toured over there with the New Zealand doctors, uh, with Angus de gl and uh, and Paul Merrick.

Uh, you know, there's a real bonding together and you know, there, there I made a speech at the end about the, the unity between the two nations over the, the last a hundred or so years. And you could just feel a vibe in the room. The people are, um, we, we, we are, we are brothers in arms. We're brothers and sisters in arms, so, you know, we want to encourage New Zealand.

We'd dearly love to talk to Winston Peters and, um, discuss how we can all work together. Okay. We wanna work on solutions, and I'd love him to be part of that. Uh, any final comments from you, John?

Uh, look, just, um, just investigate, you know, just ask yourselves questions. If, if you're worried, if you, if you're not, reach out.

Go to the a CA website. Have a look at the excellent work that's been done there to, uh. To try and explain all this madness. Uh, there's plenty of good organizations around the a CA and under it that are also doing their own things as well, which explain it. So, so go to any of those. Uh, they're, they're reputable.

They can be trusted. So, um, yeah, look, but at the end of the day, just be positive. I mean, we'll get through it. Um, yeah, it sounds doom and gloom, but at the end of the day, these people are, uh. We'll, we'll, we'll keep them on a short leash and, uh, and, and hopefully, uh, you know, we'll come out the other side better for it.

And, you know, kudos to, uh, commentators in the mainstream like Chris Smith, uh, John, Chris doing a great job to keep, uh, to keep the whole process alive. Um, and, you know, you've had, you've had great inroads, especially on radio mate. And, um, you know, the more you get to do that, the better. And, uh, you know, we, we will slowly get there.

It's just a matter of waking people up. So, um. So Katie, also, I want to talk, we've been, we planted a seed about, uh, the, um, the horror that's going on inside of Qantas Senior Management and the way they're treating staff. Uh, we touched on that, uh, a couple of programs ago. We're gonna keep feeding, uh, this little animal until it's ready to parade before the public.

But more and more is being revealed to us from Qantas Insiders about just how corrupted the HR. And industrial relations, uh, side of things are corrupted in the mean, in the way of, um, their lack of, of reason, lack of compassion. And, uh, they're, they're, uh, un their conniving, underhanded way that they're dealing with people who have been sick and, uh, they refuse to be vaccinated.

It's a story of its own. It's, we're gonna generate mainstream media interest in that story. We're contacting various journalists who we know will be interested in the information that's being gleaned to us and Qantas. We're putting you on notice in about two or three weeks time, there will be an expose on the information that's been brought to our attention and all of that information and that program will be passed on to mainstream media sources.

So be ready. It's time to get your act together. Qantas, uh, apparently the board. And the new CEO. Well, she's not that new anymore. Vanessa Hudson, they want to, um, they want a great reset in Qantas, John to improve its image. Well, I got a training the other day because of the way they handled the $120 million payout to people who were wrongfully dismissed during COVID.

Uh, they are a grubby organization with a glorious past, and they're, they're destroying that past and we are not gonna let them do it on our watch. So. Let's get behind that. That'll be coming soon. We might bring it to a close with a prayer. Lord, father in heaven, we thank you, father God, that, um, that, that we have people of courage like John and Katie who are standing for the good, though the heavens may fall.

Father, it, it's true that we need people who will not be brought of soul. People who stand as true to their moral conscience as the needle is to the poll. People who will be there for those in need. People who will, who will help those who need to find truth. Find truth. So Father, that's all we want to do, and as Trevor Loudin said in our recent interview, we have to realize, Lord, that this is a battle between good and evil.

And we have to choose this day who we will serve. And for my name, Graham Hood, as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord. Lord, may we march forward together in unity, we pray, in Jesus holy name. Amen. Uh, Mr. Larder, chairman of the a CA, I've often heard you say you just couldn't make this stuff up. You couldn't make this stuff up.

Katie, always great to see your smiling face on our screen.

Thank you. Thank you. You too.

You, you're not, you've lost interest in me because we were, we were sort of running into each other all over the country and, and New Zealand, and now it's like, this is the first time I've seen you in forever. Right.

You haven't gone off me, have you?

No, I haven't. You went at the S event.

We weren't invited to the Amps event.

Ah, well, we'll have to get that sorted. I might have to see you up at the, uh, uh, the, uh, independent media one then.

Oh, you'll see us here. Now listen, I've gotta ask the question of amps and the people who organized it.

Why was the chairman of the a CA and someone who's been at loggerheads with a PA for the last five years, why was he not on the speaker's list? It's a little ax. I've got to grind. I won't mention his name, Johnny Lader, but, um, but that is what it is.

I'm sure there'll be follow up, sweetie. It's, uh, it's, it's all about, uh, the cause at the end of the day, we just need to, uh, keep hammering away.

Keep hammering away. Definitely.

That's, that's fine. All right, well, God bless you both and uh, thanks for joining us. I'm Craig Bradbury. Stay outta the trees. You live in a great country. Stand up for it. God bless you. We'll see you next time on the show. Bye for now.
